rural electric cooperatives and public power systems in the southwestern region joined together as members of the Southwestern Power Resources Association (SPRA). What began as the Committee on Power for the Southwest, SPRA continues as a voluntary organization of consumer-owned electric systems located in Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas. These systems are customers of the Southwestern Power Administration, headquartered in Tulsa, Oklahoma, which markets hydroelectric power generated at 24 multi-purpose Corps of Engineers water projects in this region.

SPRA has a record of significant accomplishments on behalf of its membership. It supports appropriations for both the Corps of Engineers and the Southwestern Power Administration for water development studies, project construction, operation and maintenance (O&M), and the federal power marketing activities. We boast the first of its kind, tri-party Customer Trust Memorandum of Agreement (also known as the Jonesboro MOA), with Southwestern Power Administration and the US Army Corps of Engineers, allowing SPRA members to directly fund Corps non-routine O&M work necessary to ensure the reliability of hydropower projects.

SPRA has been a major force in defeating proposals to alter national policies requiring federal power be sold at cost and made available to nonprofit consumer-owned electric systems. These policies were enacted by Congress more than 90 years ago as a means to assure the benefits of national water resources development are retained by the public.

SPRA activities have benefited millions of rural and small town electric consumers in the Southwest region, while providing solid support for repayment of the federal investment in the power facilities in a consistent and timely manner. Grassroots support by its membership has assured the continued flow of federal power to the Southwestern region on a not-for-profit basis.

From The Executive Director . . .

The Board and I are pleased to bring you this updated Membership Directory. Here you will find information on each SPRA member, as well as valuable information about SPRA such as its By-Laws, Committee Chairmen and members, service territory, and a host of additional information. It is my sincere hope that this Membership Directory provides valuable and useful information to each of you.

Nicki Perryman-Fuller
Executive Director

As you browse the pages of this Directory, I ask that you take note of each of SPRA's members. Each page contains a sophisticated organization with many missions. The most important of these missions is to serve its customers. While each member of SPRA is as unique as the individual customers it serves, each has made the conscious decision to unite for a larger cause- the protection and furtherance of Federal Hydropower. To SPRA's members, Federal Hydropower is a precious, cost-effective and environmentally friendly resource which benefits over 8 million end-users.

As the Executive Director, the responsibility to protect this vital resource is one that I take seriously. Part of that protection is ensuring that the relationships between SPRA, Southwestern Power Administration, the Army Corps of Engineers national associations, trade leaders, legislators, and others are strengthened. I intend to do everything in my power to build and maintain these relationships. I believe in the benefits of Federal Hydropower, and the power that is created when SPRA's members unite for this cause.

Thank you for the opportunity to serve you. If there is ever anything I can do for you, please don't hesitate to contact me.

The U.S. Federal Power Program

There are four Power Marketing Administrations (PMAs) – Bonneville Power Administration (BPA), Western Area Power Administration (WAPA), Southwestern Power Administration (SWPA) and Southeastern Power Administration (SEPA). The PMAs market federally generated hydropower, with a right of first refusal granted to not-for-profit entities, including public power systems and rural electric cooperatives. PMA rates are set to cover all of the costs of generating and transmitting the electricity, as well as repayment with interest of the federal investment in these hydro projects. PMA power rates are reviewed annually and set in accordance with Department of Energy Order RA 6120.2 federal law, including Section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944.

Traditionally, all revenues collected from ratepayers, including projected operation and maintenance (O&M) costs of the dams, were sent directly to the Treasury with the expectation that Congress would appropriate the dollars back to the PMAs to repair and maintain these aging hydro facilities.

As Congressional appropriations continue to dwindle, SPRA members recognize this growing funding problem as a threat to the reliability of the federal power system. In 1999, a tri-party funding agreement was reached between Southwestern, the Corps of Engineers and Jonesboro City Water and Light, allowing Southwestern's customers to directly pay for specific O&M projects deemed essential to maintain the reliability of Southwestern's federal energy and power delivery. The Jonesboro Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) was the first of its kind in the nation becoming the template for success. Our gratitude goes to Mr. Ron Bowen (now retired from Jonesboro CWL) for taking on this responsibility and setting the example of "working for the good of the whole." This MOA has evolved to The Customer Trust MOA and continues to allow federal power customers to directly fund Corps O&M and decrease the need to replace hydro with more expensive thermal energy.

As one of the few providers of cost-based wholesale power, the PMAs serve as a valuable yardstick against which consumers, regulators and policymakers can measure the profit margin embedded in the cost of power from other sources.

By taking a pro-active stand in assuring a healthy federal power system, SPRA members (Southwestern's customers) have demonstrated their commitment to renewable, clean, affordable and competitive electricity.

Southwestern Power Administration

Southwestern was established in 1943 by the Secretary of the Interior as a Federal Agency that today operates within the Department of Energy as authorized by Section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944.

As one of four Power Marketing Administrations in the United States, Southwestern markets hydroelectric power in Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Texas from 24 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers multipurpose dams with a generating capacity of approximately 2,174 MW.

By law, Southwestern's power is marketed and delivered to not-for-profit municipal utilities and rural electric cooperatives. Southwestern has over one hundred such "preference" customers, and these entities ultimately serve over 8.2 million end-use customers.

Southwestern operates and maintains 1,380 miles of high-voltage transmission lines, substations, and a communications system that includes microwave, VHF radio, and state-of-the-art fiber optics. Southwestern's staff works from its headquarters located in Tulsa, Oklahoma and field offices located in Gore, Oklahoma; Jonesboro, Arkansas; and Springfield, Missouri. Power scheduling and plant dispatching are conducted on a 24-hour basis from the Springfield Operations Center.

Annual revenue for Southwestern has averaged approximately $181 million over the last five years. This revenue is used to pay the cost of operating and maintaining the generation and transmission facilities and to repay the principal and interest on the Federal Investment.

Southwestern's mission is to market and reliably deliver Federal hydroelectric power with preference to public bodies and cooperatives. This is accomplished by maximizing the use of Federal assets to repay the Federal investment and participating with other water resource users in an effort to balance their diverse interests with power needs within broad parameters set by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and implementing public policy.
